

MARMI E GRANITI D'ITALIA
Sicilmarmi dal 1948

Project name:

1801 California Street Tower

Located in Denver's central business district, 1801 California Street, formerly known as Qwest Tower, is a 54-story office building containing 1.4 million rentable square feet; it is the second tallest building in Denver. Brookfield bought the property in December of 2011 and started a renovation process aimed at attracting new tenants thanks to a revamped lobby, a new fitness center and a new restaurant. The ongoing project consists of approximately 1500 sqm of 3 cm honed Caldia marble and 700 sqm of the same material in 1 cm thickness to be used as mosaics.

Client: Brookfield Properties Corp

Architect: Morrison Dilworth + Walls

Year of completion (renovation): 1983 (current)

Location: Denver (CO), USA

Project type: Commercial

Material	Caldia honed
Thickness	3 cm slabs and 1 cm mosaics
Format	CTS and mosaics
Quantity	Approx. 2200 sqm

